Dear Bill,

I have posted a check to your old business address and believe it only polite to warn you before its arrival. As I feel I know you, I am sure you will have forwarded your mail from that address so I assume you will have no problems taking it to the bank.

The amount is irrelevant and I have also included an example of my humour.

You will just have to wait.

David.

P.S.

This email also contains to current state of hostilities in my war with the medical profession.

Dear Minister,

You have left me pondering the Mental Health Act and what protection it can provide to me.

I find two glaring flaws in it as described below.

1/ The issue is "Are you able to consent" so please do not simply consider the criterion "are you able to consent".

2/ The criterion "do you appear to be mentally ill" is being used to punish the individual as how they appear is your problem. You should develop more tolerance for the distress of the mentally ill.

Sincerely,

David Crofts.

The Hon. Tanya Plibersek M.P.

Minister for Human Services & Minister for Social Inclusion

Dear Tanya,

As your department initially forwarded me to a Centrelink officer whose mailbox is un-monitored, I thought you might like to know that this is not a satisfactory response, and that I feel your department has replaced my name with the reference code "C11/2655".

As you believe this code is important, you might like to tattoo it on your forehead and look at Nicola Roxon.

Yours sincerely,

David Crofts.

Dear Mr Crofts,

Thank you for your email of 7 June 2011 to the Minister for Human Services, the Hon. Tanya Plibersek M.P., about including services provided to Australians by overseas medical professionals in the Medicare Benefits Schedule. I have been asked to respond on behalf of the Minister.

As the Department of Health and Ageing is responsible for this matter your email has been forwarded to that department for an appropriate response.

Yours sincerely,

Ministerial Correspondence Team

Dear Madam,

Please consider including in the Medicare benefits schedule, service provided to Australians by overseas medical professionals.

I have recently returned from Canada where I paid Dr. Roman Gut of Montréal, $40.00 to receive an injection of anti-psychotic medication under the instructions of my psychiatrist in Australia, Dr. Hillol Das. I have come to understand this medication as compulsory and required by both me and the medical profession.

The only possible reason to exclude these services is to satisfy some selfish idea of national integrity.

There can be no doubt the ideal Medicare system would include these services as it is clearly positive and would benefit many Australians. It may even foster closer professional ties between doctors of all countries. This could only be mutually beneficial.

Any compensation of my medical expenses is to be paid to me personally, not an overseas doctor, so you would not be exporting wealth.

Yours sincerely,

David Crofts.

P.S. I am currently on a Disability Support Pension so any additional support would be greatly appreciated.
